

Parental Notification of the Laws Relating to the use of Seclusion and Restraint in the Public Schools Revised July 2018

Introduction

You have been provided with a copy of the “Procedural Safeguards in Special Education.” The Procedural Safeguards document outlines your rights and the rights of your child under the federal Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (the IDEA) and the Connecticut statutes and regulations concerning the provision of special education and related services to children with disabilities.

The Board of Education is also required by state regulation to inform you about a specific provision of the state statutes and regulations regarding the emergency use of physical restraint and seclusion or the use of seclusion as a behavior intervention in a child’s IEP. Every parent must be advised of these rights at the initial Planning and Placement Team meeting (PPT) held for their child even if the emergency use of physical restraint or seclusion

Who are the children covered by the law?

P.A. 18-51 uses the term “students” to describe the people generally covered by the statute. For the public schools, the “student” (A) is a child enrolled in grades kindergarten to twelve, inclusive, in a public school under the jurisdiction of a local or regional board of education, including special education students ages 3-21 (B) a child receiving special education and related services in an institution or facility operating under contract with a local or regional board of education (C) enrolled in a program or school administered by a regional education service center established or (D) receiving special education and related services from an approved private special education program, but shall not include any child receiving educational services from (i) Unified School District #2, established pursuant to section 17a-37, or (ii) the department of Mental Health and Addiction Services.

What does “physical restraint” mean?

Physical restraint means any mechanical or personal restriction that immobilizes or reduces the free movement of a child’s arms, legs or head, including, but not limited to, carrying or forcibly moving a person from one location to another. It does not include: (A) briefly holding a child in order to calm or comfort the child; (B) restraint involving the minimum contact necessary to safely escort a child from one area to another; (C) medication devices, including supports prescribed by a health care provider to achieve proper body position or balance; (D) helmets or other protective gear used to protect a child from injuries due to a fall; or (E) helmets, mitts and similar devices used to prevent self injury when the device is part of a documented treatment plan or IEP and is the least restrictive means available to prevent self-injury; (F) or exclusionary time out.

What does “seclusion” mean?

Seclusion means the confinement of a child in a room, from which the student is physically prevented from leaving. “Seclusion” does not include an exclusionary time out. In public schools, seclusion does not mean any confinement of a child where the child is physically able to leave the area of confinement such as in-school suspension and time-out.

What do I need to know about the emergency use of restraint and seclusion?

1. Life threatening physical restraint is prohibited. Life threatening physical restraint means any physical restraint or hold of a child that restricts the flow of air into a child’s lungs, whether by chest compression or any other means. Restraint conducted in a face down, prone position is prohibited.
2. Involuntary physical restraint may not be used to discipline a child; it may not be used because it’s convenient and it may not be used as a substitute for a less restrictive alternative.
3. Involuntary physical restraint is to be used solely as an emergency intervention to prevent immediate or imminent injury to the child or to others. When a child is physically restrained, the child is to be continually monitored by a person who has the training as described in #9 below. Monitoring means direct observation of the child or observation by way of video monitoring within physical proximity sufficient to provide aid as may be needed. A child who is physically restrained must be regularly evaluated for any signs of physical distress by a person who has the training as described in #9 below. The evaluation must be documented in the child’s educational records.

4. Involuntary seclusion is to be used solely as an emergency intervention to prevent immediate or imminent injury to the child or to others. Involuntary seclusion may not be used to discipline a child; it may not be used because it’s convenient and it may not be used as a substitute for a less restrictive alternative.
5. When a child is involuntarily placed in seclusion as an emergency intervention to prevent immediate or imminent injury to the child or to others, the child is to be frequently monitored by a person who has the training as described in #9 below. Monitoring means direct observation of the child or observation by way of video monitoring within physical proximity sufficient to provide aid as may be needed. A child who is involuntarily secluded must be regularly evaluated for any signs of physical distress by a person who has the training as described in #9 below. The evaluation must be documented in the child’s educational records.
6. A child may not be restrained or placed in seclusion for more than fifteen minutes unless necessary to prevent immediate or imminent injury to the child or to others. A restraint or seclusion may be continued over fifteen minutes only if an administrator, or such administrator's designee; a school health or mental health personnel, or (3) a board certified behavioral analyst, who has received training in the use of physical restraint and seclusion, determines that continued physical restraint or seclusion is necessary to prevent immediate or imminent injury to the student or to others. A new determination must be made every thirty minutes regarding whether such physical restraint or seclusion is necessary to prevent immediate or imminent injury to the student or to others.
7. A psychopharmacologic agent (medications that affect the central nervous system, influencing thinking, emotion or behavior) may not be used with your child except as prescribed by a physician and administered according to the orders of your child’s physician and in compliance with board policies concerning the administration of medications in the school.

8. A child may be physically restrained or removed to seclusion only by a person who has received training in physical management, physical restraint and seclusion procedures including training to recognize health and safety issues for children placed in seclusion. Additional training such as verbal defusing or de-escalation; prevention strategies; types of physical restraint; the differences between permissible physical restraint and other varying levels of physical restraint; the differences between permissible physical restraint and pain compliance techniques, monitoring to prevent harm to a child physically restrained or in seclusion and recording and reporting procedures on the uses of restraint and seclusion must also be provided.
9. Public schools are required to maintain a safe school setting. Public schools are allowed to use reasonable physical force when and to the extent there is a reasonable belief it is necessary to protect students or staff, obtain possession of a dangerous instrument or controlled substance upon or within control of a minor, protect property from physical damage or restrain a child or remove a child to another area to maintain order. The prohibitions listed in Items 1-5, above, do not conflict with the responsibility of public schools to maintain a safe school setting or use reasonable physical force as described here.
10. Any room used for seclusion must be physically comparable to other rooms in the building used for instructional purposes and must be of a size that is appropriate to the chronological and developmental age, size and behavior of the child. The room used must be free of any object that might pose a danger to the child who is placed in the room. If the door has a lock, the lock must be able to be disengaged automatically in the case of an emergency. The room must have an unbreakable observation window located in the wall or door to allow frequent visual monitoring of the child and any other person in the room. This window or other fixture must allow for the student to have a clear line of sight from inside the room beyond the area of seclusion. However, the requirement for an unbreakable observation window allowing for clear line of sight beyond the area of seclusion does not apply if it is necessary to clear and use a classroom or other room in the school building as a seclusion room for a person at risk.

business days after the emergency use of physical restraint or seclusion.

What kinds of reporting is done by the schools on the use of restraint and seclusion?

11. The school must document any use of physical restraint or seclusion in the child’s educational record and, if an injury occurs, in the child’s health record at school by completing an incident report. The State Department of Education provides a model standardized incident report.
12. Where restraint or seclusion is of an emergency nature, the incident report must include: (a) the nature of the emergency, (b) what other steps, including attempts at verbal de-escalation, were taken to prevent the emergency from happening if there were signs that this kind of an emergency was likely to happen, (c) a detailed description of the nature of the restraint or seclusion, (d) how long the child remained in the restraint or seclusion and (e) what effect being in seclusion had on the child’s medical or behavioral support or educational plan.
13. The school district must record each instance of the use of physical restraint or seclusion and the nature of the emergency that necessitated its use and include this information in an annual compilation on the district’s use of restraint and seclusion.
14. The district’s annual compilation is submitted to the Department of Education through the restraint and seclusion online data submission which provides a snapshot summarizing the frequency of use of physical restraint or seclusion on students,
